LETTER OF INTENT FORM

Instructional Telecommunications Foundation (ITF) is dedicated to promoting the use of media online and mobile technology for progressive social change. The human right to freedom of expression and speech in pursuit of tolerance, understanding and truth, has no boundaries when applied in the world of online and mobile technology.

Technology and telecommunications have, in this day and age, become more accessible to all. The challenge is to design innovative ways to reach and engage the public, including individuals isolated in rural communities, the poor in devastated inner cities, the detached students in schools and campuses, and other important constituencies for promoting progressive change.

ITF encourages and invites proposals from creative individuals in organizations searching for new ways to reach and engage participants in progressive social change.

The three broad areas of funding include:

• Informative and/or interactive progressive media venues
  Media venues range from virtual sites online to channels that receive and broadcast audio, visual and text messages as communication to empower & educate people for progressive societal change

• Media activities to promote progressive social change
  Innovative use of digital technology including use of cellular phones and other portable devices for participation in advocating for and engaging in social change

• Freedom of expression and speech
  Alternative media in all its forms and monitoring the rights of the marginalized, disenfranchised and minorities to give voice to their thoughts and opinions

Who We Are

• Instructional Telecommunications Foundation (ITF), a non-profit corporation provides instructional video programming to schools in Indianapolis, Kansas City, Las Vegas, Philadelphia, Phoenix, Sacramento and Salt Lake City, through FCC’s education broadband service system.
• All non-commercial, free educational programming available for member schools to tape and use
• ITF offers educational data services to non-profit organizations and educational institutions.

What We Fund

• ITF supports initiatives aimed at harnessing media for promoting progressive social change.

• We support efforts to engage communities in advocating for and participating in creating alternative forms of media and preserving the human right to free speech and expression.
As we experience the convergence of media, prepare for digital broadcast nationally, and promote access to all the greatly enhanced features of mobile devices, there are lots of opportunities for innovations in applying technology to distributing content for public dialogue, for grassroots organizing, and mobilizing to affect important legislation.
